METHOD

The Method looks radical, like it means business—and it won't disappoint. Expect high-performance climbing out of them because of the extreme look, but you'll be surprised by the comfortable fit and the mind-blowing CTX thermo-moldable heel and toe box. It has a snug-fitting heel cup and the ribbed rubber over the top of the toe box and tongue is a big help.

The toe-down profile pushes your toes right to the end of the slipper, meaning you can use smaller holds, and you'll find it works well on smears too, thanks to the new Gryptonite™ HT rubber and last design.

SPLITTER

The Splitter is designed to hold your foot in a comfortable neutral position for dexterity and mobility in crack climbing, long routes, and all-day comfort. This shoe can be worn tight, stretching to fit, putting the foot into a high-performance power position.

The Splitter is now available in a womens model that supports a smaller foot volume, higher arch, and sports a lower cut around the ankle bone for a snug fit. The Gryptonite™ rubber makes you can feel confident that you foot will stick to whatever you throw it's way.
